(Case called)

2.3

THE COURT: Good afternoon. I understand Ms. Srivastava needs to leave at 4:30.

MS. SRIVASTAVA: That's correct.

THE COURT: So we are going to have to take this a little faster than we originally had planned.

We are here because the two related cases Lopez v. New York City Department of Homeless Services, et al., was referred to me by Judge Caproni for general pretrial and dispositive motions.

At the outset, and I want to say this very quickly, I understand there may have been a misunderstanding, Ms. Lopez, about whether you needed to appear. You consented to ECF notification, and we also directed the pro se office to send you an additional email with the scheduling order in this case. So you do need to check your email frequently.

MS. LOPEZ: Yes, your Honor.

THE COURT: As a litigant in this court, you are expected to prosecute your case, show up on the dates where conferences are scheduled. Ms. Quinn, my deputy, called me as a courtesy because the Court would have been well within its rights to cancel the conference and sanction you for not showing up.

As a further matter, Ms. Quinn speaks to me and speaks for the Court as a whole. You will treat her with respect. If I hear of another instance where you treat any court personnel this way again, I will sanction you. Do you understand?

MS. LOPEZ: I don't understand what a sanction means and I'm not --

THE COURT: Stop, just a minute. We have very limited time here. A sanction is essentially some sort of a punishment for transgression in the case. A typical sanction, if you had been with a lawyer --

MS. LOPEZ: I'm not.

THE COURT: Stop. I know. If you had been a lawyer and you had failed to show up, and this actually happened a couple of weeks ago in another case, the defendants could have made a motion for the cost for them coming to attend the court conference and having to wait for somebody to no-show.

We have some procedural issues to deal with in this case that I would like to go forward with today that hopefully we can get through in the next 24 minutes. I'm going to remind you again, everything that we do scheduling going forward and as has happened in the past should come to your email address. You need to check that email inbox, check your junk mail, make sure. It is your responsibility to check that email inbox periodically to make sure that you get the notifications.

If your email address has changed, please notify the pro se office immediately. If it turns out that you have a mailing address or even a P.O. box where hardcopy items could be mailed to you, please notify the pro se office, so we can also add that to the docket so that there is another way for us to contact you. The more ways we have to make sure that you get notification of conferences, the better.

MS. LOPEZ: Your Honor, if I may?

THE COURT: Yes.

MS. LOPEZ: Would you like me to stand?

THE COURT: No. You can stay seated.

MS. LOPEZ: What was the name of the court personnel you said contacted me?

THE COURT: Ms. Quinn.

MS. LOPEZ: Ms. Quinn here?

THE COURT: Yes.

MS. LOPEZ: I record all my incoming calls. Since you brought up, your Honor, if we are able to get to the issues at hand within 24 minutes, fine. But you brought up a call that was placed from this Court to my phone who I have a record of, a digital record. So I take huge issue at someone implying I was rude. And your tone afterwards was sort of conceding that I was rude.

On the record, the communication went as follows. And if you would like to have the marshals retrieve my phone and have the digital file transferred to yourself and the government, we can do that. The conversation was, are you going to show up? I was extremely humble in saying, excuse me?

I had no idea there was court.

In trying to seek procedural clarification, the only

New York way I can say it is she got snippy. I wasn't looking for legal advice. She said, you need to get here in 20 minutes or else. When you speak to someone that's been raised by attorneys and you say "or else," even if the "or else" was going to be you could be sanctioned, you could be whatever -

Ms. Quinn was nasty with me.

I don't want to misrelate what happened. It was, you need to come, you need to get here. We have a governor and mayor fighting over the transportation system. I could have been one stop away and still not been able to get here in a time where she didn't express what the contingent outcome would have been if I didn't make it on time.

So I take issue that Ms. Quinn said I was rude. I'm in touch with a number of attorneys that will attest that I have spoken to. I deal with people how they deal with me. So your Honor, noted about the sanctions.

Since Ms. Quinn caused the Court and everyone to be wasting our time with this since she elevated that complaint, I will point out to this Court, no matter how we circle this strange, even if the Court were to sanction me, I have been domiciled in a ward of the city and New York State or federal government since I was a child. Is this Court going to sanction me and make them pay?

Let's move on with the matters of the case and please respect that I am a pro se litigant. I respect this Court, but the allegations within the complaint before this Court are germane to my ability to function on a day-to-day basis. I'm homeless, I'm stressed out. I don't appreciate being spoken to like there was numerous occasions of me sort of missing court.

Your Honor, because there is such a history, long history, with the specific defendants in this case, and even marshals in this room -- I have a criminal case where my affirmative defense is that marshals in this courthouse, aside from criminal stuff, harassed me and my dog in a separate incident last year.

So setting this up as adversarial where you said if I find out if you disrespect another member of this courthouse, you just gave motivation and impetus to the people behind me who are involved in either the criminal matter before Judge Lehrburger or even this case.

I am dealing with people how they deal with me, your Honor. It is our first time meeting with each other. I apologize if I was late. You can ask Mr. Roberts. I always beat him to the courthouse. This is outside my pattern. I apologize.

THE COURT: Is there a problem with your email address?

MS. LOPEZ: No, there is not.

THE COURT: It hasn't changed?

MS. LOPEZ: There were just so many filings at the same period regarding the Caproni case and filings by new counsel, her appearance. They all came within a week period and they all say the same header. I just must have looked over the one that demanded that I be here today.

THE COURT: The scheduling order will be called an order. Future conferences for court appearances will be entitled "order" or "scheduling order."

MS. LOPEZ: Yes, your Honor.

THE COURT: Those are the ones that you should really focus on.

MS. LOPEZ: Yes, your Honor.

THE COURT: Because you are a pro se litigant, I will not schedule anything less than three weeks in advance unless it is truly, truly, an emergency that one of the parties raises. Okay?

MS. LOPEZ: Yes, your Honor.

THE COURT: But the rest of the time I will do so so that there is ample opportunity for you to get the order and for you to seek an adjournment for good cause if you need an adjournment. If you need to reschedule because you have a conflict, you can always write to the Court, make sure you get consent from the other side, and propose a new date. Okay?

MS. LOPEZ: Yes, your Honor.

THE COURT: This is how we will deal going forward.

MS. LOPEZ: Yes, your Honor.

THE COURT: We now have less than 20 minutes before

Ms. Srivastava turns into a pumpkin. What we have today are a lot of procedural matters. It is really a matter of the parties being here and hearing. We are not hearing argument on anything of substance.

The first thing is a question for the defendants. Were any of the nonmunicipal defendants served in the state court action?

MS. LOPEZ: Thank you, your Honor. Right before that little tidbit, I was going to start by saying I know that I have no right to counsel in this case. But even if the Court were to accept the minimal of my factual chronological assertions of the order of things, it is beyond complicated for many attorneys --

THE COURT: Let me stop you. I don't mean to interrupt you to be rude, but we really do need to move quickly.

MS. LOPEZ: I would was going to ask if the Court would consider asking, as did Judge Caproni in the initial ADA case, ask a favor or ask a firm if they would for procedural reasons stand up with me in the initial part of the case to help me. I have no problem navigating this and --

THE COURT: Okay, stop.

1 MR. ROBERTS: Your Honor, could I ask a question?

THE COURT: I have one question. It was a procedural issue.

MS. LOPEZ: No, I didn't understand that I had to.

I'm sorry. I didn't understand the process.

THE COURT: I'm not asking if you had to or not. I'm asking were the nonmunicipal defendants served.

MR. ROBERTS: My understanding is no.

MS. LOPEZ: No.

2.3

THE COURT: This is a preliminary matter. If they had been served, removal would have been improper, we would have had to remand to the state court, and so on. It is actually quicker that they have not been served. So the removal is proper. That was the first thing I had to deal with.

The second is the request for consolidation of the newly removed case, the state court case that got removed to federal court, and whether that can be consolidated with the case that you previously had brought before Judge Caproni.

MS. LOPEZ: Now we are all on board.

THE COURT: Do you agree?

MS. LOPEZ: No. I would like to challenge it, and I'm not sure procedurally or legally how to do so. To save everyone's time and back and forth, if the government is so convinced that they are going to win, it just speeds along their win.

THE COURT: Time out. What I would do if the case can be consolidated -- maybe I can convince you to consent to consolidation -- is rather than having two separate filings and the cases going on parallel tracks and having your inbox inundated with emails and trying to figure out what case it is on, it all would be conglomerated under one case number, one case number.

The complaint that you filed in state court would be deemed to be the amended complaint in the original action that you brought in federal court. That complaint would control, and we would be dealing with that complaint and the allegations that you make in that complaint. It would not be depriving you of any additional rights. The claims that you made in state court will be brought before the federal court.

MS. LOPEZ: I understand. Your Honor, since we are on the record, I will inform you and the government my plan is to file a whole nother article 78 tomorrow. Basically, there has been another conflict around an administrative procedure.

I'll stop, Mr. Roberts. I don't want you to miss what I'm saying. It's quite important.

I'm just laying this on the table. The issue for me is always because I'm still in the living situation as last year. Until that changes, until DHS capitulates to following the law, I might be filing another article 78 tomorrow, which will be mucking things up even more.

Just to make your Honor aware, the state court here across the street has made it very easy for poor plaintiffs to come forward. They have a new in-house procedure that assigns index numbers for periods of four months at a time so that new poor person proceedings don't need to be made with every case. I can use the existing document number or file as a poor person.

MR. ROBERTS: Can you are well under your rights to file an article 78 proceeding. I cannot give you legal advice, but my understanding is that the complaint that you filed in state court also had a motion for a preliminary injunction. If the 2018 case is consolidated with the previous case you had with Judge Caproni and we order that the complaint in that case becomes the controlling complaint, we will get to your motion for preliminary injunction faster. In fact, one of the issues I had on my agenda today was to set a briefing schedule for the defendants to respond to your motion for preliminary injunction.

If you want to oppose consolidation, which it is your right to do -- although from my reading of the two complaints, they cover many of the same facts and much of the same case law -- we would end up briefing the motion for consolidation which you are opposing. The case would probably get consolidated anyway, and then it would be that much later that we could deal with your motion for preliminary injunction.

MS. LOPEZ: Yes, your Honor.

they got it as well.

THE COURT: I assume the defendants have no objection to the consolidation?

MR. ROBERTS: Correct. I in fact support the consolidation as a housekeeping matter.

2.3

THE COURT: The other issue is service. We will order service on the nonmunicipal defendants because you are pro se and you are proceeding in forma pauperis. Once we get your answer, Ms. Lopez, on whether you consent to consolidation, then we will also issue an order that cleans up the caption so it makes it a little clearer for our purposes.

I will say right now, because I have you here and we have a court reporter here, that if we do not hear from you by close of business tomorrow, we will assume that that means consent.

MS. LOPEZ: Yes. That saves me work.

THE COURT: Exactly. You should email us only if you object to consolidation. How's is that?

MS. LOPEZ: Okay.

THE COURT: On the motion for preliminary injunction, let's set a schedule assuming that Ms. Lopez consents to consolidation. If that doesn't happen, then we will have to set a new scheduling order with a briefing on consolidation as well.

Ms. Lopez, we are going to deem your state court filing to be the opening brief, so you don't need to file lose any more time. That would be July 31st. I did say July 27th, that's the Friday. Sorry. July 27th for plaintiff's reply brief and June 15th for the opposition brief.

That is all I have for today. It's really just about procedural matters and housekeeping. Since you will likely be briefing the preliminary injunction over the summer, there shouldn't be additional — or should there be an additional status conference? Ms. Lopez?

MS. LOPEZ: I just take exception, your Honor, to the issue. I don't think we are going to be briefing anything all summer. I only say that because in my intent to seek judicial relief tomorrow in state court, which I won't be doing if I consolidate, it is my plan, whether it exhausts the government or this Court, to be back in front of this Court arguing for TRO until I get safe housing.

With that said, there are changes. I want to go back to something you originally said about there being so much overlap or duplicity in the case that was originally in front of Judge Caproni and the new case removed from state court. I believe that there were two or three fundamentally new issues, one relating to my eligibility for relief for immediate relief and the circumstances about irreparable harm.

But irreparable is only one element. I think that I would be in a much better position to argue the City of New York's arbitrary and capricious nature of my placement at this time is inconsistent with the rest of their policies.

With that said, I don't want to annoy people, but I will be coming to court soon. If this Court could maybe urge the other side to engage in good faith settlement talks so that we don't have to keep coming back to court and it keeps me from having to keep seeking relief in different ways, that would probably be best for everyone.

I want to say on the record here, I want this to be I don't actually enjoy litigating. One day I will, but done. not yet. I'm not getting paid.

THE COURT: Here is what I am going to do, because I do understand and Ms. Srivastava needs to go. We are at 4:22 now. Why don't you also, Ms. Lopez, file a status letter with the pro se office a month from now. We'll give you to June 29th, but you can file it before that if you want. File a status letter with the pro se office indicating whether you have reached out, whether you and the defendants have engaged in settlement negotiations. I am not going to get involved right now because you have indicated that you plan to file another article 78.

MS. LOPEZ: This brings me back. If I don't and I concede to consolidation, it will be sort of this Court's business.

THE COURT: Then it will be and we will be moving along. If you have an application for emergency relief, that this new complaint, whether consolidated or not, the city was served I think on the 11th but the other defendants haven't been served yet. I think it makes sense and I request that there be a period of time for the service to get done by the marshals and get everybody in, and then we can have one date when everybody either answers or moves to dismiss that motion rather than having them come seriatim. It is a long-winded way of asking for an extension of time from you for me to answer the complaint in the second action.

THE COURT: What is your response?

He has had the complaint for this entire MS. LOPEZ: time. Whether or not the other parties have the complaint is absolutely not relevant to Mr. Roberts unless there is some type of assertion here that there will be some kind of coordinated joint defense. If you have read, some of the parties, the defendants, acted completely independent of the city in their own particular. There is no need, and I object.

Ms. Lopez, this is part of the Court's THE COURT: housekeeping needs. It becomes very difficult for us to keep track of which defendants and to have the parties in for a status conference, frankly. It's better to have all of the defendants here when we have the next status conference.

We are going to adjourn today. We are going to issue an order for service on the remaining defendants who have not yet been served. They will then have an answer date. I'm not sure how long it will take for the service. Mr. Roberts, we can set a housekeeping date. You can write in for an
